Happy New Year! The elders send their greetings and wish you the best in 2016. They are thankful for the warm apartments, care and nutritious meals your donations make available to them each and every day. In the evenings when it is quiet at the Heritage Living Center, I visit with the elders and listen to them talk about the old days. Days of poverty, isolation and hardship. Father Emmett often wrote about growing up during the Depression and the difficult times his family experienced. He said it did not compare to the suffering of the Cheyenne. My life was similar. During the 50s, 60s and 70s, I lived in Oklahoma, Nebraska and Montana, and grew up in a family that worked hard and struggled to make ends meet. But, it was nothing compared to what I hear from the elders and see, even today, on parts of the reservation.

You can know that your gifts change the lives of elders. They now live longer and healthier lives. We can’t change the clock as everyone ages, but through your gifts we can provide safe shelter, nutritious meals and care to assist them in their elder years.

I want to tell you about how wonderful Christmas was this year at the Center. Your gifts and donations blessed us and made it possible for the elders and staff to be part of something special. During Christmas, we filled boxes with enough food to make a nutritious meal for families so their holiday wouldn’t be just another hungry day. Those families almost always have an elder living with them. I’m pleased to tell you that we helped over 100 families in towns like Ashland, Rabbit Town, Birney, Lame Deer and Muddy Creek.

Some of the food recipients didn’t understand what was happening at first. If they didn’t see our small bus pull up to their out of the way home and wonder what was going on, they surely wondered why someone was knocking on their door. After some caution, they realized that we had food for them and their hesitation turned to a sense of... surprise and gratitude.

Great joy filled the Center’s residents and staff. We were so excited to be part of the food deliveries. We loaded up boxes and traveled across the frozen landscape to bless families with the gift of food. The photo at the top of page 1 gives you an idea of the winter conditions we “enjoyed” as we traveled from village to town bringing food to needy families and elderly shut-ins. I was told many times that this year was the most meaningful Christmas our residents had in a long time. As they walked to houses with the food, they began singing Christmas carols that they hadn’t sung in years. Elders Delpha Harris, Rita Shoulderblade, Lazona Harris and many others joined in. Other elders spent time with children at the Boys and Girls Club of the Northern Cheyenne as each child received a toy or game. For the elders, the children’s laughter and hugs were “gifts” they will always remember.

Thank you for making this past Christmas one to remember at Heritage Living Center. It was a time when we thought about the needs of others rather than our own needs.

Looking into the future I don’t need to look very far to see a project where I desperately need your help. After 14 years, our building is getting tired. I recently wrote a letter about our leaking roof and the water that comes into the building at the entrance to the dining room. I can’t close off this area. It is the most heavily used part of the building where the residents gather three times a day for nutritious meals.

To keep water from entering the building our administrator, Jerry Thex and maintenance leader, Brian Red Star take a team up on the roof after each storm and clear the snow and ice so that when it thaws, the water doesn’t pool and leak in above the dining room entrance. I have a top-notch roofing company standing by as soon as I can raise $10,000 needed to replace the damaged section. They must remove soft boards, waterlogged insulation and rebuild the roof with just the right slope to drain and keep the building dry. I’ve worked with this company before and I know they will do the job right. You can count on your donation being used wisely.

If you haven’t had an opportunity to respond to my letter, look for the light blue envelope in this newsletter and send a generous gift to help us with this unbudgeted cost.

Thank you for your friendship and generosity. If you are new to Soaring Eagle, I hope our friendship lasts a lifetime. If you are a longtime benefactor to Soaring Eagle, thank you for sticking with us and sharing your donations with us over many years. If you plan to travel to Montana this summer, consider stopping by. We have a guest room you can stay in overnight, enjoy breakfast with the elders and resume your travels. We would love to have you visit.

God bless you for your kindness.

With a grateful heart,

Mike Skaggs
When Susie Tall White Man Cain was born, her parents and nine others lived in a tent. Her father was a ranch hand and her mother took in washing. One summer when Susie was a young girl, the family moved into a rough log cabin that had once been used as a schoolhouse, built soon after the Northern Cheyenne first came to their reservation. It was a big, wonderful step up from the tent.

Their new surroundings were glorious pine-covered hills and valleys. The children played games on the prairie where great horse herds once roamed. The land was lush with flowers and berries. Then the Great Depression of the 1930s arrived, and with it came a decade of drought. The land dried up and dust filled every nook and cranny of their cabin, their clothes and hair.

Susie watched her hard-working mother tan deer hides - rubbing flour into the leather to make them white. These she sold along with beaded moccasins. The children loved the sleigh rides, Susie remembers, riding in it to church and after services eating cookies made by a white lady named Mrs. Schmaus. Naturally the little ones took to calling her “Mrs. Mouse.”

Early one morning the children heard someone yelling, “Yoo-hoo. Anybody home?” They ran outside. There was Mrs. Mouse with a big bowl of eggs and fresh baked bread. Susie’s mother was so grateful to have wholesome food for her children. The farm wife had walked down the long road from her ranch house carrying the food she knew her neighbors would gladly accept. For years afterward, the generous, devout woman’s calling card - “Yoo-hoo” - would be heard, announcing to Susie’s family she had brought them fresh foods. Susie fondly recalls the memory of Mrs. Mouse, and how she seemed to always come by and call out just when they had completely run out of everything.

Susie now lives at HLC. Recently she said she knew where her old log home was and if we wanted to see it, she would take us there. The road to the homestead is now paved, until we turned onto a rutted dirt road with tall grass growing down the middle. The chinked log structure was built by strong hands more than a century ago - it still sits solid - though it’s missing windows and half of the roof. Across the rural highway sits their old wagon, now a roadside ranch decoration. Susie was quiet as she peered in the doorless entrance of the old home to see what remained - things she might recognize and remember. Then she turned back and smiled. I wondered if she heard Mrs. Mouse calling.

From the bed of the old family wagon, Susie looks out over her childhood prairie playground. Below, she peers into the front room of the log home, looking for clues of their time there.

Caring and Sharing Two Gift Planning Ideas

Soaring Eagle’s friends are able to give in many different ways. Most people think of writing a check. It is easy and quick to accomplish. Checks are always good and help us meet our immediate needs for the elders. Some donors use credit cards. It’s easy, convenient and each month the donor has a statement with all of their purchases and donations in one place.

When a donor contemplates a special gift, it can take planning and time to complete. These are usually called planned gifts meaning they take planning on the part of the donor, their advisors and sometimes, the charity receiving the gift.

This article presents two planned gift ideas for those thinking about making a special gift to Soaring Eagle.

Your Will – You Need One

Many people think that you need a will only if you are wealthy. If you have any assets at all, you need a will, even if your estate is modest, your heirs few and your wishes simple.

If you don’t have a written will, the state in which you live has prepared one for you. The state written will is impersonal and usually a “one size fits all” plan for distributing your property and deciding who will have guardianship over minor children. That is probably not a very good solution for most people.

For most persons, a well written will designed to meet their family and personal needs and desires is the best way to go. It is usually best to seek the advice of an attorney who works in the area of estate planning. Before visiting with an attorney it can help to spend a few minutes to consider the Four Ps of estate planning.

People – Who are the family members, friends and charities important to you and for whom you want to provide when you pass away?

Property – List all of your property. Helpful information to include is the original cost (if known), today’s value and the way it is owned. Do you own it with someone else including your spouse, children, business partner? Include debt on the property and income associated with it.

Plans – Consider how you would like to match your property with the people you have listed.

Planners – List the professional advisors who would assist you in making your plans a reality. That list will likely include an attorney, accountant, financial advisor, and sometimes a charity representative.

For many people a will is the document they need to carry out their final plans. For others it is one part of their estate plan that they wish to consider. The rest will come with the honor of living as long as I wish I could spend more. Most often, if the small amount I send is a sacrifice, one of joy!

May the most Holy God truly bring peace, health and all good to you all. I cherish each and every one of you.

Much love,
Patrick “Little Eagle”, Ohio

December, Congress passed the PATH Act of 2015 and the President signed the legislation into law. What is significant about the PATH Act is the Qualified Charitable Distribution from an IRA is now a permanent law. Donors and charities will no longer have to wait, hold their breath, and wonder if that tool will be available to them each year.

The requirements to make a Qualified Charitable Distribution are as follows:
1. Funds must be transferred directly from the IRA to the charity.
2. Applies only to distributions from IRAs (not 401(k) or other qualified plans).
3. IRA owner must be age 70½ or older on the date of the donation from the IRA to the charity.
4. The maximum limit is $100,000 per person in a single year.
5. Must be to a public charity like Soaring Eagle.
6. The Qualified Charitable Distribution counts towards satisfying the IRA owner’s required minimum distribution obligation for the year.

Now that the legislation is permanent, donors may want to look at making their Qualified Charitable Distribution earlier in the year as they plan for their required minimum distribution. Donor’s plans for their IRAs can include gifts to charity as part of a complete financial plan each year rather than an afterthought or last minute use of funds to meet their required minimum distribution.

Donors should keep in mind that securities, bonds and mutual fund shares can be transferred directly to Soaring Eagle without converting to cash. For information on how to accomplish such transfers, please contact us.

Check with your IRA advisor to see if a Qualified Charitable Distribution to Soaring Eagle can fit in with your annual financial goals utilizing your IRA.

Over the years I have gained a healthy respect for the snow and cold weather because it has taken the lives of so many people on the reservation, some were my close friends. One of my greatest fears of winter is to be caught in a blinding ground blizzard on some isolated stretch of road.

I stood by my window today, watching the blowing snow. Driven by high winds it seemed to be snowing horizontally. I glanced at the thermometer; the temperature fell eight degrees in less than an hour. I thanked God as I thank Him now. I thank you for helping make the Heritage Living Center possible.

I relived the day many years ago when Benno Standing Elk accompanied me on a bright, sunny, but very cold winter morning, to check on children who had not returned to school on Sunday with the other boarding students. I feared they might be sick, perhaps needing help, food, or firewood to heat their tar-paper covered homes to keep out the blowing wind and snow.

We didn't speak much as we made our way down the winding road. Suddenly, Benno pointed to a little log cabin along the Tongue River saying, “There is something wrong with Woodenthigh!”

“How can you be so sure he needs help?” I asked. “There is no smoke coming out of his chimney; he must be sick,” he answered.

We shoveled our way through deep snow to get to Woodenthigh’s cabin. Benno knocked on the door – there was no answer. He pounded his fist on the door. We heard a weak voice saying, “Come in!” There was no heat in the log cabin. Woodenthigh was on his cot shivering in the cold, burning with a fever. I ran to the car for a blanket I always carried for emergencies. We wrapped him in the blanket and carried him to the car. The 62 miles to the nearest hospital seemed endless as I listened to his coughing and moans. Thanks to Benno’s sharp eye, Woodenthigh recovered.

During winter storms, elders share memories of their sufferings. They remember going without food so they could feed their children or heat their cabins. They thank me and the benefactors for providing the Heritage Living Center where they are warm, safe and their needs are taken care of each day.

This is the most difficult time of year to provide the care they need. For some reason contributions have fallen off, while the bills pile up and wait to be paid. Your generous gift is the only hope and means we have to provide for the daily care of the elders.

I will ask God to bless you and your loved ones abundantly for your sacrifices and generous help.

Your beggar friend,
Father Emmett
